ReadyTechs Success Fuels Business Expansion to Newark, New Jersey

Company plans to add 10 employees in 2009

Newark, NJ, September 23, 2008 - ReadyTechs, a leading provider of network management solutions, announced today that the company is opening a second office in New Jersey on October 1st in order to meet the increasing demand for ReadyTechs' services.

ReadyTechs is expanding their business operations to 550 Broad Street, one of the most sought-after corporate addresses in Newark, New Jersey's Central Business District.

550 Broad Street offers a number of smart building advantages, including vertical wiring with fiber optic cable, a video conferencing center; and 24-hour security. Directly across the street from the landmark Washington Park, 550 Broad Street is easily accessible by the new Light Rail system and PATH trains, and is convenient to Newark Liberty International Airport and the tri-state area's main thoroughfares.

ReadyTechs provides enterprise-quality network support services to small and mid-sized businesses, with highly affordable offerings for every type of network and every business need; from 24/7/365 support to computing-capacity-on-demand plans. ReadyTechs also enables businesses to make the most of their infrastructure investment by utilizing new technologies such as virtualization and cloud computing. Businesses get all the benefits of these innovative services, without the expense and hassle inherent in deploying, securing and managing emerging technologies.

The company expects to add at least ten employees to its workforce roster in 2009.

"ReadyTechs' focus on finding cost-efficient ways for smaller businesses to compete, cut costs and open new streams of revue has proved to be of value for many businesses and has led to strong growth for our company over the past year," said Gerry Libertelli, founder and president of ReadyTechs. "We're very pleased about this new phase of expansion for our company, and look forward to continued success for ReadyTechs and our clients."
